

---

Contents

Foreword	v
Acknowledgements	vi
Introduction	vii
1. Definitions and classifications	1
Background	1
Early classifications	3
Current WHO classification	5
Description of the different types of female genital mutilation	6
2. Prevalence and epidemiology	9
Background	9
Africa	10
Refugee and immigrant populations	18
Evidence of prevalence in other regions	21
3. Health consequences	23
Development and functional anatomy of the external female genitalia	23
Physical consequences and complications	25
Psychological and sexual effects	31
4. Research	37
Past research	37
Suggested research agenda	38
5. International, regional and national agreements and actions	50
International	50
Regional	55

National	56
Ethical considerations	57
6. WHO policies and activities	59
7. Conclusion	63
References	66
Recommended further reading	73